Department Introduction

The Department of Korean Language trains experts with systematic knowledge of the Korean language and culture. The curriculum centers on three certifications: the Korean Language Teacher Certification (National Institute of Korean Language), the Multicultural Society Expert Certificate (Ministry of Justice), and the Reading and Essay-Writing Instructor Certification (HRD Korea), while also developing Korean-language content creators.

Department Description

The department has three goals: training Korean language teachers through a program accredited by the National Institute of Korean Language, training multicultural society experts who understand multicultural social phenomena, and training reading and essay-writing instructors with literary knowledge and skill in guiding reading and writing. Graduates can pursue careers as Korean language teachers at educational institutions at home and abroad, as multicultural society experts supporting immigrant families, or as reading and essay-writing instructors for children and foreign speakers.
