Department Introduction

The Department of Social Welfare trains social welfare experts equipped with both the knowledge and creative practical skills needed to help improve the social functioning of individuals, families, groups, organizations, and communities. The curriculum is built on a shared understanding of social welfare, then provides more specialized practical skills.

Department Description

The program equips students with long-term care knowledge and skills as well as policy-development ability, plus insight into multicultural families and communities. Graduates are prepared to become professional social workers, social welfare counselors, and even social welfare civil servants, through a curriculum that progresses from fundamentals to field practicum.
